SUNDAY CLOSING OF POSTOFFICE RULE MODIFIED

On account of a modification of the recently ordered abolition of the general delivery and lock box service on Sundays, it will still be possible for persons expecting letters of importance to obtain them on Sundays if the office of origin is known to the recipient, according to Postmaster Pratt.

This modification has grown out of the protest which arose when it became known that the general and lock box delivery service had been discontinued. In cases whereby delay in the receipt of a communication would be embarrassing or inconvenient to the persons to whom it is addressed, inquiry at the main office it is stated will cause search to be made for the letter, which will be given to the applicant.

The modification restores the usual delivery of post office matters to persons stopping at hotels. Newspapers sent to news dealers will also be delivered on Sundays, providing the papers are bundled and properly addressed to the dealers for whom they are intended.

MANY ARRESTED FEW CONVICTED

Smiles illuminated the features of thirty-five Chinese, who lined up before District Magistrate Monsarrat this morning upon a charge of being at a place where gambling was carried on.

The Celestials who were grouped so picturesquely before the police throne of justice were gathered in through the efforts of Chief of Detectives McDuffie and his staff. The delegation represented four separate raids made by the officers.

Evidence offered proved insufficient to convict the Chinese and Judge Monsarrat discharged the bunch. As each defendant had deposited ten dollars as bail to insure an appearance at court, the return of this money created a scene likened to a raid on a bank.

About every one interested in the conduct of the court was anxious to hasten proceedings this morning in order that the Republican Territorial convention might be visited. The session was therefore short and sweet. A number of cases were sent over until a later date.

SUMMER FINDS SEAGIRT, N. J., BUSY WITH VISITORS TO GOVERNOR WILSON'S HOME

SEA GIRT, N. J.—This place, where is located the summer home of Governor Wilson, has taken on the appearance of a "summer capital." The Democratic presidential nominee is visited daily by scores of politicians and other friends. One of the principal diversions is "sitting for pictures," and the Governor and the members of his family have been photographed many times with their guests. Among those in the accompanying group are (1) Miss Jessie Wilson, (2) Thomas Taggart, Indiana national committeeman; (3) Mrs. Wilson; (4) Miss Eleanor Wilson and (5) Miss Margaret Wilson.

was assessed a fine of three dollars for having violated a city and county ordinance which prohibits the sweeping of refuse upon a public sidewalk.

C. Charlie, a vendor of lemonade and peaputs at the ball game Sunday was alleged by the police as being the instigator of a lousy crap game. This morning the Chinese was ordered to pay $25 into the city and county coffers.

Two drunks, the victim of Saturday evening joyousness were handed three meal tickets at Hotel Asch.

PRESIDENTIAL ASPECTS

The main issue will be the tariff, followed closely by questions of so-called anti-trust legislation, economy and efficiency. The Republicans will present a party record of half a century, culminating in the record of Mr. Taft, while the Democrats will present the usual promises and pretenses, which really mean a desire for offices and a division of spoils.

Mr. Taft will be nominated because he is the logical candidate because he deserves a second term, and because the people want him to continue the work so well begun which cannot be completed in a single term.

A brief survey of the work to date will emphasize this assertion. First as to appointments. No President has ever had more important appointments to make, and so President has ever approached and completed the task with such calm, judicial deliberation and with the determination and courage to select the man best fitted for the place, regardless of any other consideration whatever. This has particularly been shown in the naming of a Chief Justice and Associate Justices of the Supreme Court and in other judicial appointments, as well as of every minor official. Second, as to economy and efficiency. This has been exemplified to a greater degree during the present administration than ever before in our history. Our constantly increasing population and increased needs for expenditures make a normal increase each year almost unavoidable, and yet President Taft and his advisers have actually succeeded in substantially reducing the expenses of the Government, while at the same time its efficiency has increased. The President has set a precedent in sending to Congress a number of short messages dealing with single subjects, instead of one long, voluminous message. This course has met with universal approval.

Again, Mr. Taft is a big, generous, hearty, broad-minded, whole-souled man who has gone among the people of almost every State, has learned their views and their wants, and has tried to respond, so far as in him lay, to their wishes. But our country is vast in its length and breadth, and diversified in its resources and products, and has a population of 90,000,000 souls, no two of whom think exactly alike. It would be impossible for a President, proscribed by statutes and limited in power to please every citizen, every State or every section. No President ever has been successful in such endeavor; none ever will be. History within memory tells of the dissatisfaction of certain classes with Lincoln, with Grant, with Hayes, with Garfield, with Cleveland, with Harrison, with McKinley, with Roosevelt, and so it is with Taft. Probably the most disagreeable task which confronts an administration is the execution of an obnoxious or unsatisfactory law—yet the duty of the executive is plain; and the law, not the executive, should be blamed, but a thoughtful people do the opposite. The Sherman law never was and never will be satisfactory in its present provisions and lack of provisions, but its terms must be carried out until a wiser, more equitable statute takes its place.

All Republicans agree in the tariff plank of the last platform, which says: "In all tariff legislation the true principle of protection is best maintained by the imposition of such duties as will equal the difference between the cost of production at home and abroad, together with a reasonable profit to American industries," although they do not agree in the details of its interpretation.
